The goverment has recently passed a law regarding young drivers. It is a graduated system. A 16 year old can get an intermediate license and at 17 a person can get their full license. The law affected me. I had to get an intermediate license. It did not bother me though. I thought it was a good idea.

The graduated system keeps the young people safer. With the intermediate license a person can only have one friend in the car with them. So if the young person had a wreck, there would be less lives to be lost. Young person's with the intermediate license can't drive after 10:00 pm. That helps them stay out of trouble.

I support the graduated system. It can only do some good. It keep's the road's safer and helps protect the younger folks to. A young person would only have to wait one more year before they get their full license anyway. I don't think there are any disadvantages with the system. It can only do good for our young people even if they disagree with it.
