

HOW MUCH WEIGHT SHOULD YOU GAIN?

If your weight was normal before pregnancy, you should gain at least 25-35 pounds during pregnancy. Your baby accounts for only part of the weight you must gain. You will gain weight in other areas of the body to help support your growing baby.

1-1 ½ lbs.	breasts
½-2 lbs.	placenta (afterbirth)
2 ½-3 lbs.	uterus (womb)
9-14 lbs.	increased blood and fluids
7-8 lbs.	Baby
4-6 ½ lbs.	mother's stored fat protein and other nutrients

25-35 lbs.

During the first three months expect to gain a total of about 2-4 pounds. During the last six months you need to gain about 1 pound each week. Pregnancy is not the time to lose weight. For your baby's health you should gain the amount listed below

If you are	Overweight	15-25 lbs.
	Underweight	28-40 lbs.
	Expecting twins	35-45 lbs.

BREASTFEEDING

Have you thought about breastfeeding? Breast milk has just the right amount of nutrients to help your baby grow. It also contains substances which can prevent infections. When you breastfeed your baby, the bond between mother and child is loving and close. Ask your health care provider now about breastfeeding.

WHAT YOU EAT IS JUST AS IMPORTANT AS HOW MUCH

While you're pregnant, the food your baby gets comes from the food you eat.

This pamphlet tells you what and how much to eat while you are pregnant. And remember to drink liquids daily - water, milk or fruit juices.

CAUTION

Everything you do can make a difference to your baby's health. If you smoke, drink alcohol (including wine and beer), or take drugs, your baby does too. These could harm your unborn baby. Be aware of the risks! Because caffeine may also be harmful to your baby, limit the use of coffee, tea and cola drinks.

EXERCISE

It is important even when you are pregnant. It can very relaxing and help you feel good all over. Exercise also helps you get your figure back after the baby is born and reduces constipation. Be sure to talk to your doctor first before starting an exercise program.
