Casey at the Bat

By Ernest Lawrence Thayer

Published 1888

The outlook wasn't brilliant for the Mudville nine that day:
The score stood four to six with just an inning left to play;
And so, when Cooney died at first, and Burrows did the same,
A sickly silence fell upon the patrons of the game.

A straggling few got up to go, leaving there the rest
With that hope that springs eternal within the human breast;
For they thought if only Casey could get one whack, at that They'd put up even money, with Casey at the Bat.

But Flynn preceded Casey, and so likewise did Blake,
But the former was a pudding, and the latter was a fake;
So on that stricken multitude a death-like silence sat,
For there seemed but little chance of Casey's getting to the bat.

But Flynn let drive a single to the wonderment of all,
And the much-despised Blake tore the cover off the ball;
And when the dust had lifted, and they saw what had occurred,
There was Blake safe on second and Flynn a-hugging third!

Then from the gladdened multitude went up a joyous yell,
It bounded from the mountain-top, and rattled in the dell,
It struck upon the hillside, and rebounded on the flat;
For Casey, mighty Casey, was advancing to the bat.

There was ease in Casey's manner as he stepped into his place,
There was pride in Casey's bearing, and a smile on Casey's face;
And when, responding to the cheers, he lightly doffed his hat,
No stranger in the crowd could doubt 'twas Casey at the Bat.

Ten thousand eyes were on him as he rubbed his hands with dirt,
Five thousand tongues applauded when he wiped them on his shirt;
Then, while the writhing pitcher ground the ball into his hip,
Defiance glanced in Casey's eye, a sneer curled Casey's lip.

And now the leather-covered sphere came hurtling through the air,
And Casey stood a-watching it in haughty grandeur there;
Close by the sturdy batsman the ball unheeded sped:
"That ain't my style," said Casey. "Strike one," the umpire said.

From the benches, black with people, there went up a muffled roar,
Like the beating of the storm-waves on a stern and distant shore;
“Kill him! Kill the umpire!” shouted someone in the stand.
And it's likely they'd have killed him had not Casey raised his hand.

With a smile of Christian charity great Casey's visage shone;
He stilled the rising tumult; he bade the game go on;
He signaled to the pitcher, and once more the spheroid flew,
But Casey still ignored it; and the umpire said, "Strike two."

"Fraud!" cried the maddened thousands, and the echo answered, "Fraud!"
But the scornful look from Casey, and the audience was awed;
They saw his face grow stern and cold, they saw his muscles strain,
And they knew that Casey wouldn't let that ball go by again.

The sneer is gone from Casey's lip, his teeth are clenched with hate;
He pounds with cruel violence his bat upon the plate;
And now the pitcher holds the ball, and now he lets it go,
And now the air is shattered by the force of Casey's blow.

Oh, somewhere in this favoured land the sun is shining bright,
The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light,
And somewhere men are laughing, and somewhere children shout;
But there is no joy in Mudville—mighty Casey has struck out.

Independent Practice:

Imagine you are one of the players on the Mudville baseball team and you watched as mighty Casey struck out. Mudville lost! Now, look beyond the big loss, after the game was over and all the fans had left the stands. You and your teammates, including Casey, have packed up your gear and are heading out of the ballpark. Emotions are running high and you all decide to stop and talk it out before you go home. You can see that Casey feels bad about his choice to risk the game, but some of your teammates are still angry. You know that you have one chance to make everything right again before your next big ballgame.

- You are a teammate on the Mudville baseball team. Write about what happens next. What does the conversation sound like? Who talks? Who stays quiet? Who leaves? Who stays? Who is stubborn? Who forgives?
- Most importantly, what do you say that might help to make it easier to move forward? How are you going to help solve this problem?

Remember, you will want to include words and phrases that help your reader feel the emotion in this conversation. You will need to add dialogue to help your reader know who is talking. You will also want to use descriptive words to help your reader see the conversation as it unfolds. Don't forget to do a good job of sharing the way you think this problem can be solved. I know you are going to help your team move beyond this situation. You are a really good problem-solver!
