Per capita Personal Income in Tennessee, Metro Areas, and Counties for 1999, 2000, and 2001

Per capita personal income is the annual total personal income of residents divided by the resident population as of July 1. The annual total personal income of the above equation is derived by summing the net earnings (by place of residence), personal rental income, personal dividend and interest income, and transfer payments. Personal income is measured prior to deductions of income tax and other personal taxes and is reported in current dollars.

In Tennessee, the per capita personal income in 2001 was $26,808, up $518 (or 1.97 percent) from the previous year. The metropolitan counties increased by 2.4 percent during the year while the non-metropolitan counties rose by only .7 percent during the past year. This difference in growth rates points to the disparity in growth between the urban/ suburban counties and the rural counties in Tennessee.

This disparity was further evidenced by the counties with the highest and lowest per capita income. The counties with the highest per capita income are (in order) Williamson County ($41,524), Davidson County ($36,394), Shelby County ($32,420), Hamilton County ($30,130), Knox County ($29,426), and Anderson County ($27,194). These counties are all part of metropolitan statistical areas (MSAs). The counties with the lowest per capita income are Lake County ($13,306), Hancock County ($13,418), Johnson County ($14,463), Union County ($15,178), Wayne County ($15,357), and Lauderdale County ($15,522). The counties with the lowest per capita income are all rural counties (except Union). Four of the above named counties also had declining per capita income in 2001.

The counties with the highest percent growth in per capita income were Grundy County (up 9.16 percent) and Van Buren County (up 6.1 percent). The counties with the largest percent decline in per capita income were Pickett County (down 6.31 percent) and Lauderdale County (down 5.32 percent).

In the Metropolitan Areas . . .

The metropolitan statistical area (MSA) with the highest per capita personal income was the Nashville MSA (at $32,338) followed by the Memphis MSA (at $30,559). The MSA with the lowest per capita personal income was in the Clarksville-Hopkinsville

MSA (at $23,017).

The Memphis MSA had the highest percentage increase from 2000 to 2001 with an increase of 3.54 percent. The Jackson MSA had the biggest decline in per capita income with a drop of 1.6 percent Since 2000, the per capita personal income in the Knoxville MSA has increased above the Chattanooga MSA due to a decline in Chattanooga in 2001.
