As everyone knows, the Baltimore Ravens beat the San Francisco 49ers 34-31 in this year's Super Bowl in New Orleans. Here are some of the things you didn't know about Baltimore, San Francisco, and New Orleans.

New Orleans. The U.S. median was $50,502.

Education Levels

In San Francisco 52.1 percent of residents over 25 years old had a bachelor's degree or higher while 85.9 percent were high school graduates. In Baltimore 27.5 percent of residents over 25 years old had a bachelor's degree or higher while 80.5 percent were high school graduates. In New Orleans 32.4 percent of residents over 25 years old had a bachelor's degree or higher while 83.7 percent were high school graduates. The respective national figures were 28.5 percent and 85.9 percent.

Forty-six percent of San Francisco's residents, 5 years and older, spoke a language other than English at home. In Baltimore that number was 8.1 percent while in New Orleans it was 8.7 percent. On average, 20.8 percent of the population speak a language other than English in their home.

Commuting Patterns

It takes U.S. commuters an average of 25.5 minutes to get to work each day. In San Francisco, the average is 29.6 minutes with 37.6 percent driving alone and 31.6 taking public transportation. In Baltimore, the average is also 29.6 minutes. However, in Baltimore, 60.7 percent of those commuters drive alone and 17.5 percent take public transportation. Ten point one percent carpool in Baltimore. New Orleans has the shortest commute at 22.7 minutes. In the Crescent City, 69.5 percent of the workers drive alone while 9.7 percent carpool. Only 7.8 percent take public transportation.

Founding of the Cities

Baltimore is the oldest of the three cities. It was first settled in 1661 by David Jones. Baltimore was established as a city in 1729 and named after Lord Baltimore (Cecilius Calvert), the governor of colonial Maryland. New Orleans was founded by the French in 1719 as Nouvelle-Orléans, under the direction of Jean-Baptiste Le Moyne de Bienville. The city was named in honor of the then Regent of France, Philip II, Duke of Orleans. San Francisco was claimed in 1769 by Don Gaspar de Portolà for Spain as part of the Viceroyalty of New Spain. The area was called Yerba Buena after an indigenous herb of the same name. In 1776 the Mission San Francisco de Asis was established. In 1847 a proclamation changing the name Yerba Buena to San Francisco took effect.

Size and Income

San Francisco is the 14th most populous city in the U.S. The estimated 2011 population was 812,826. Baltimore is the 24th most populous city with a 2011 population of 619,493.
